The Institute for Women’s Leadership and Social Responsibility

Proudly Presents the 2012-2013 Distinguished Speakers Series:

Women’s Leadership as a Natural Way of Life Personally, Professionally, and Globally
Dr. Dorothy “Dot” J. Maver, Ph.D., is an educator and peacebuilder who inspires cooperation on behalf of the common good. Utilizing a shared responsibility and shared leadership model (SR/SL) developed over thirty years, she attracts individuals and groups to a common purpose while creating a work environment that demonstrates right relationships in a culture of peace.

Dr. Maver is president and CEO of the National Peace Academy in the USA, executive director of the River Phoenix Center for Peacebuilding, coordinator of Push4Peace, and a founder and governance member of the Global Alliance for Ministries and Infrastructures for Peace. She formerly served as president and CEO of Peace Partnership International where her talents in education, politics, and grassroots community organizing were focused on applied peacebuilding.

Her career as an educator included teaching at Norwich University, where she developed and taught two courses in the Peace Corps and Service Leadership Department. At the Graduate Institute in Connecticut, she developed a master’s intensive course titled, “Shifting from a Culture of Peace”. She also served as a 2011 World Affairs guest lecturer at Iowa State University, and as a keynote speaker and workshop facilitator at conferences worldwide.

From 2005-2007, Dr. Maver served as executive director of The Peace Alliance Campaign for the U.S. Department of Peace, and prior to that, was the national campaign manager for Kucinich for President 2004. She was a key member of the planning and coordinating team for Share the Spirit of the Peace Summits in Vermont, at the United Nations and in Sydney, Australia. Dr. Maver co-authored the book, Conscious Education: The Bridge to Freedom. She also is widely published on the subjects of ‘working for peace.’
Julia E. Hubbel is an award-winning entrepreneur, international professional speaker, seminar leader and prize-winning journalist in the art of communications and charisma.

Julia is a disabled, decorated Vietnam Era veteran who served as a journalist and television producer-director in the Army, and as the Chief of Military Protocol for the Jimmy Carter Presidential Inaugural in 1977.

In 1997, Julia created a diverse network of top-level professional women in the Pacific Northwest’s Inland Empire, using her model for establishing relationships. The Hubbel Group became a voice of professional women from all backgrounds and spun companies, partnerships and lasting friendships. The remarkable story of The Hubbel Group is profiled in the bestselling book, Networking Magic, by authors Rick Fisherman and Jill Lublin.

She has spent nearly three decades in senior corporate and consulting positions in the areas of training and organizational development in America, Australia and New Zealand. Her clients include: Dell Computer, Southern California Edison, Archer Daniels Midland, Intel, Chevron, Hewlett Packard, Bank of America, Delphi, Cisco Systems, Qwest, Schering Plough, Mass-Mutual, Sodexo, Lockheed Martin, Pfizer, and Microsoft.

Julia holds a Bachelor of Science degree in communications and public relations from American University in Washington, DC. She earned her certificate as a Supplier Diversity Professional in 2008. She has also authored WordFood: How We Feed or Starve Our Relationships (2010).

Last year, she was invited as a featured speaker at the U.S. Air Force Academy’s annual National Character and Leadership Symposium.

As a teenager, Ms. Tania Archer captured many first place finishes within the 60 meter indoor, 100 meter outdoor, and 200 meter outdoor competitions. In addition to breaking and setting many new local, provincial and national age category records, she was one of the youngest Canadians in the history of modern Canadian women’s sprinting to have the preliminary opportunity to compete for a placement on the country’s 1992 Olympic team trials (Barcelona).

Tania studied industrial and consumer marketing habits at the University of Alabama. As a key team member for the Lady Tide, under the guidance of sprint coach Wayne Williams and former U.S. Olympic athlete Calvin Smith, she placed eighth at the SEC championships as a freshman, as well as running qualifying times for the NCAA Championships as a junior and a senior. In 1995 and again in 1996, Tania was one of several international athletes, competing in the U.S. on behalf of a U.S. college or university, invited to compete in the US Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships; she sprinted in the 60m dash against the likes of Gail Devers, Jackie Joyner-Kersee, and Marion Jones. Supported by Valan Sargeant of the Hamilton Olympic Club, Archer finished within top placements of the 200m trial finishes during the 1996 Canadian Olympic Trials.

Today, Tania draws upon her national and international business experiences to positively affect and contribute to the growth of her family’s wealth management firm, the Archer Investment Group, Inc. Tania has represented top Canadian companies such as CBS Broadcasting, Inc.; the outdoor advertising division, Lamar Outdoor Advertising (formerly Obie Media); CIBC Wood Gundy; Universal Studios Canada, the music division; and Merrill Lynch Canada. She consults internationally for companies such as BMG South Africa, the Essequibo Group Guyana and a variety of U.S. and Canadian Recording Labels.
Jin In knows personally the set-backs and ongoing challenges of growing up female and impoverished in a gender-repressed culture. Although she was born to a wealthy family in Seoul, South Korea, the death of her father when she was seven months old left her mother, her sister, and her destitute because “Korean property laws in those days did not recognize wives as blood relatives.” Her mother left Jin and her sister with grandparents in Korea and headed to the United States to learn English, to acquire a job, and to dream of reuniting with her daughters. They were reunited five years later in Houston, Texas.

After progressing in medical school, Jin came to the realization that medicine in most countries has “forgotten women… (who) are treated as second-class citizens (and they)… suffer needless brutalities, extreme poverty, acid attacks, ‘honor’ killings, and violent rapes.” Her life’s mission soon became one of “empowering girls and women” globally by “combining global thinking with local action” that results in “glocal innovation.”

Now serving as the founder and president of 4Girls GLocal Leadership (4GGL), Jin has created a multigenerational and multinational network of “women specialists and undergraduate students from the U.S” to cause “bold social change” in the ways the “world’s poorest girls” are valued, educated, and developed as leaders.

Today, 4GGL “advances all eight Millennium Development Goals” of the United Nations and is positioned to serve nearly one-half million girls around the world. By attending to poverty as an outcome of gender inequity, Jin and her organization have caused a “total paradigm shift in the way we think about girls in the developing world—from victims of poverty to a powerful force for change. Developing the leadership of girls and young women not only opens new vistas for them, but it can have a magnifying and transformative impact on traditional and repressive societies.”
Lorry M. Fenner, Ph.D., Colonel (USAF, Ret.)

Col., (USAF, Ret.) Lorry M. Fenner, Ph.D. serves as Director of the Conflict Records Research Center, of the Institute for National Strategic Studies, at the National Defense University. Retired from the U.S. Air Force after 26 years as an intelligence officer and space operations officer as well as an academic, Dr. Fenner has held a variety of command and staff jobs worldwide.

In addition to assignments as a satellite system flight commander, signals intelligence squadron commander, deputy group commander, and vice wing commander, she served nearly five years as a professional staff member for the House Armed Services Committee acting as the staff lead for the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee for four of those years. She also served as chief of intelligence force development at the Pentagon and in Major Command staffs, including the Air Staff, the Joint Staff (J-5, Strategy Division), and the Secretary of Defense’s staff. In 2001, she coauthored Women in Combat: Civic Duty or Military Liability?, published by Georgetown University Press.

Dr. Fenner also served on the staff of the Scowcroft Commission (NSPD-5, Comprehensive Review of Intelligence, 2001) and the 9-11 Commission (2003-2004), and as a Fellow at the Supreme Court of the United States (2002-2003). She taught history at the U.S. Air Force Academy and strategic studies at the National War College.

Dr. Fenner will serve in February of 2013 as Cottey College’s first Scholar-in-Residence, and will work with Cottey students, faculty, and staff engaged in, or hoping to be engaged in student-led research.
