

“The Future Belongs to Those Who Believe in the Beauty of Their Dreams”

~Eleanor Roosevelt

by Steve Reed

We’ve heard these expressions so many times, they have lost their meaning for most of us: “There is no great reward without great risk.” “If at first you don’t succeed, try, try again.” “The race doesn’t always go to the swift, but to those who keep running.” Despite the overuse of these bromides, there is a nugget of truth in them. It’s only when we see them fulfilled that we realize how much truth was hidden in them.

Never were these sayings truer than in describing the circumstances that brought Maria Sicay from Guatemala to Cottey College. Long-term readers of the Viewpoint may remember in the Spring 2010 issue, we ran a short feature on Maria who was going to come to Cottey as the first native Guatemalan student. In that article was the bold statement, “...next year Cottey will welcome its first Guatemalan student, Maria Sicay, the first recipient of Cottey’s Friends of Peace Scholarship...” That did not happen; well, on the predicted timeline, anyway. Two years after her anticipated enrollment, Maria became a Cottey student. Along the way were any number of obstacles that could have prevented or discouraged her from attending.

From the beginning

The story began back in 2006 when Dr. Brenda Ross, professor of chemistry, visited Guatemala as part of a service learning trip. (Ross leads this same service learning trip every year over the Christmas holiday break for Cottey students and alumnae.) On that first excursion, Anna Verhoye, who organizes the trips, mentioned to Ross that Cottey could be a good place for a Guatemalan student to attend, because of Cottey’s small size and all-women classes. The seed had been planted.

The following year, Ross visited with the late Father Greg Schaffer, who ran the Catholic mission at San Lucas Toliman, where the Cottey service learning crews lived and worked. She asked his thoughts on whether this was a good idea or not. A month later, Dr. Ross took $100 of her own money to seed the Friends of Peace Scholarship, which today has a principal balance of over $18,000, thanks especially to an individual who made a $10,000 contribution.

“My goal was to allow Mayan women to come to Cottey,” explained Ross. Now that the goal had been set and the fundraising had begun, the next step was to find the right student.

First, you need a student

“I ended up working with Brother Dennis Evans of the San Lucas Toliman Scholars,” she continued. “His foundation works with five different schools, which gave us more students to look at.”

Brother Dennis developed a questionnaire for prospective students, and five responded. Two students were selected from those five. The first student, who had the top marks at her school, wrote her essay on how coming to Cottey would be a benefit to her. The second student selected, Maria, wrote her essay on how her Cottey education could serve her community.

When the first student learned her best friend was not selected, she withdrew. Ross inquired if Maria was willing to come alone to Cottey. Maria said yes.

Language proficiency, the first obstacle

Maria was a good student, and was willing to travel alone to Cottey, now she had to meet the English language requirement for international students. At Cottey, students who are not native English speakers must score a 50 on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Unfortunately, Maria’s scores were not high enough to qualify her for admission to Cottey that first year. Maria would either have to raise her scores and apply again the following year, or Cottey would need to find another student.

Two things happened to help Maria follow through on improving her TOEFL scores. First, Cottey students raised money to help pay for Maria’s tuition at an English language school. Second, two Spanish-speaking Cottey students stepped up to Skype with Maria and help her practice English.

“The next leap of faith was to raise money for her [Maria’s] English education,” said Ross. “I made a mistake, though,” she admitted. “I was afraid of the financial commitment and paid for three days per week of instruction instead of five days.”

Cottey students raised money through their annual Hunger Banquet, and Ross sold Guatemalan textiles at Founder’s Day and Vacation College. She partnered with the campus organization Change In Action to help raise the necessary funds. Of course, there would be more obstacles.

Two years later, that statement became true.

Cultural obstacles

It is not common for Mayan women to go away to school. In Guatemala, the cultural norm is to educate sons, not daughters. Also, families tend to be close-knit in Guatemala, and sending a daughter thousands of miles away to school was also out of the ordinary. In fact, it was not typical for families to send daughters away to another town for schooling. To learn English, Maria would need to leave Santiago Atitlan on Mondays, travel four hours by bus to Xela (pronounced shay-la) where she would attend the Instituto Guatemalteco Americano English school. On Fridays, she would board the bus and return home. Maria's family did not want her to do that.

"School is more a boy thing," said Maria of Guatemalan culture. "My family disagreed at first, but I said I wanted to change the story of girls. In my town, girls get married at 15 to 17 years old. I wanted to study. Once the opportunity is gone, it never comes back."

"It was scary," Maria admitted. "But it was something I still wanted to do."

Another cultural obstacle was that there were very few native Mayan students enrolled in the English school.

"School is expensive," said Maria. "Most of the students are Ladino, not Mayan. Most students have more money."

Fortunately, Maria had two more allies back on campus: Patricia Martinez and Silvia Arzapala.

Hello, Cottey?

Martinez and Arzapala are bilingual and were Cottey students at the time Maria was working on her English. Arzapala also attended the Guatemala trip the year Ross met with Maria and her parents, and Arzapala also met Maria at that time. Both students chose to get involved after Ross asked them if they could help.

"We were part of the fundraising with Brenda since our freshman year," said Martinez. "She told us we had the opportunity to help more than just writing letters."

Maria had Internet access a couple of times per week, and Martinez and Arzapala would Skype with her.

"It wasn't so much language instruction," said Martinez, "but more talking about culture and what to expect when she came to the US. It was more of a bilingual conversation. She would read to us in English and we would help her with her pronunciation."

"We talked about Cottey," said Maria. "I learned about suites and the activities they did, courses and professors. It made me want to come to Cottey even more."

Finally, success! Sort of.

After two years of hard work, Maria retook her TOEFL and passed. But, by the time she passed the test, it was, in one way, too late to get admitted for the 2011-12 academic year.

"Maria could have come earlier, but our financial aid had already been distributed for the year," said Ross. "However, that extra year allowed her to raise her TOEFL score even higher than necessary for admission."

As it turned out, Maria has a knack for languages. That would provide both an opportunity and an obstacle.

Opportunity/Obstacle

Now Maria had fluency in English, but missed the window to enroll at Cottey for the next academic year. She used that new language ability to get hired as a translator by the Christian Foundation for Children and Aging. Maria would meet with people from English-speaking countries who came to meet with sponsored children and also translated letters.

"The new challenge was, now she's earning more money than she had the potential to do before," said Ross. "We were concerned that now she had no incentive to come to Cottey. We had the fear that we were offering something that might never happen. Brother Dennis told us, however, that we've helped improve her life whether she came to Cottey or not."

Finally, Maria comes to Cottey

Three years after she began the process to enroll at Cottey College, Maria entered as a member of the Class of 2014, and a resident of Reeves Hall. She takes classes in English, Spanish composition, web design, digital art, and speech. She particularly likes computer classes, and is fond of professor Kathy Taylor. What does Maria think of Cottey now that she is here?

"It's good," she said, smiling. "It's given me a lot of ideas and opportunities in Spanish classes to learn more about my country. Cottey has helped me to be more objective and be a leader always. It is helping me to get ready to start working."

Lessons learned

The process of getting Maria to Cottey has been an education for everyone involved.

"If I could have done anything differently, I would have had the courage to put all the money up front instead of being afraid," said Ross. "I also didn't understand you could apply to foundations for scholarship support. The biggest lesson learned," she continued, "was to look around and find people who have similar motivations, interests, and work."

Martinez is thrilled to have played a part in helping bring the first Guatemalan student to Cottey.

"It is nice to see that something so small like Skyping and helping her to learn the language could pay off," Martinez said. "It is great to see that something Cottey women started years ago by selling bracelets led to a Guatemalan woman coming to Cottey."

Maria's advice to other women is simple, although sometimes hard to do.

"They have to follow their heart," she said. "If you want to be important and help others you have to study. I like to study," she added.

Maria knows it may be a challenge to find the next Guatemalan student.

"It is not an easy thing," she admitted. "It's more of a cultural thing than language. Families won't let go of their girls easily."

Still, Maria hopes to be an example for other girls. At this point, it seems as though she already is.

Springtime at Cottey means flowers, leaves on the trees, Founder's Day, and graduation for Cottey students who will join the ranks of ALUMNAE.

Founder's Day is a nostalgic and meaningful time for Cottey College alumnae. It is a time to reconnect with Cottey and its many friends and supporters; a time to buy that Cottey sweatshirt, key ring or decal that you've longed to own; and a time to visit with current students about their hopes and dreams as Cottey graduates and how they see Cottey in the future.

The members of the Cottey College Alumnae Association hope that you will put Founder's Day, April 5-7, on your calendar this year. Make your hotel and plane reservation and join us for a wonderful weekend of remembering the past and lauding the future of Cottey. This might also be a good time to write those checks for the A Defining Moment Campaign and our very own "Alumnae Challenge" to help renovate Neale Hall into a part of the new Fine Arts Instructional Building (FAIB).

When we reach our goal of $2 million, the alumnae will have the opportunity to rename our old Neale Hall. Please plan to join the Cottey College Alumnae Association, your many Cottey friends, students, and Dr. Rogers at Founder's Day as we celebrate together the past, the present, and the future of Cottey. There is a lot of excitement in the air, and we sincerely hope that YOU will plan to attend Cottey Founder's Day, 2013. You are guaranteed a wonderful time!

Where Leadership is Learned

by Judy R. Rogers, Ph.D.

Cottey's Leadership, Experiences, Opportunity (LEO) program is aptly named. We provide many, many experiences and opportunities during the course of an academic year to allow LEOs to find their interests and practice their leadership. Our calendar of spring 2013 events lists 30 different possibilities for involvement that vary from lunches with speakers to discuss their leadership experiences to field trips, enrichment events, or career development workshops. LEO participants choose what matches their interests and use these opportunities to fulfill a portion of the LEO certification requirements. These requirements change and become a bit more demanding and complex as the student moves from Level 1 through Level 4 of the program.

An important part of the journey through the LEO program is meeting and interacting with women leaders and identifying women role models. Both these activities assist the student with defining her own leadership style and learning to practice that style. However, there is a very important lesson that every aspiring leader needs to learn. Leadership is not just "doing." Leadership is stepping up and earning the support of a team who is willing to be led to complete a worthwhile project. We all have a tendency to want to take over and get the job done, but as the "job" or vision grows complex, it cannot be completed by any one person, but rather needs a team with a capable leader.

During the fourth semester of the LEO program, students may choose to complete a voluntary community service project as a Presidential Leadership Project. It is the choice of the student; she may successfully complete LEO certification without a Presidential Project, but the project is an additional opportunity to practice leading. I am the sponsor of each Presidential Project, and each participant writes a formal proposal for what she would like to achieve. I can provide modest funding if there are expenses required to complete the project. I want students to learn to manage a small project budget and accomplish big goals with small means. Most importantly, I want each student to assemble a team to lead to accomplish the goals of the project. When the project is completed, the student writes an evaluation of what was accomplished and what she learned from leading the project. Each is also required to make a to be continued from year-to-year with new leadership each year. The Cottey Hall of Fame is a great example. The leader of this project is partnering with the Cottey Office of Alumnae Relations to create a wall of pictures in Grantham Hall of the academic building recognizing outstanding Cottey alumnae who attended Cottey at least one year. This year, ten outstanding alumnae will be selected by the project team. Candidates will be evaluated based on their leadership roles and meaningful contributions to women and/or a global community. The leadership practices taught during the LEO program will be used as the evaluation criteria. The leader of this project believes students will be inspired as they see the accomplishments of Cottey women who went before them.

Leadership learning continues for students who choose to stay at Cottey to complete a four-year major. In fact, women's leadership is a common thread that supports the interdisciplinary nature of all the majors. To quote one of our faculty members, Dr. Sylvio Mannel, "The goal for Cottey is to provide an education that allows our students to become leaders in the world and change the world for the better."

This semester nine students have chosen to lead Presidential Projects. As in past years, the projects are varied. One has been completed already, and I know of its success. This LEO student led a team to create a Valentine celebration at the Nevada Senior Center. Her team consisted of 12 Cottey students who made celebratory posters and decorations and planned a Valentine party. Since every party requires refreshments, the students baked and decorated heart-shaped cookies. There were approximately 20 seniors who enjoyed a Saturday afternoon with Cottey students at a festive Valentine party.

Other projects closely follow the interests of the LEO student, and so a basketball player will lead her team to teach a basketball clinic for middle school girls at the community center. Some of the projects are designed

Faculty Focus: Dr. Ganga Fernando

Cottey is fortunate to have talented faculty. In addition to being excellent teachers, they often engage students in learning outside of the classroom. Dr. Ganga Fernando, professor of chemistry, has been giving Cottey students incredible opportunities in the chemistry field. Here are highlights of what she and Cottey students have been doing lately.

Four students, Emily Moore, Ciera Mack, Sayaka Uchimura and Paige Sparrow joined a year-long research project, under the supervision of Dr. Ganga Fernando, on "Cyanotoxins and metal content in surface water in and around Nevada." A brief outline of the

Retirement Announcement

It is with regret that Cottey announces the retirement of Mary Haggans, vice president for administration and finance, effective June 30, 2013. Mary's dedication to Cottey and her reliable expertise in her field will be sorely missed. She has headed many important projects and has led her department to excellence. Cottey is very grateful to her for generously sharing her talent with the President's Office in numerous situations. Mary will continue on a quarter-time basis from July 1, 2013, through June 30, 2014, as a special assistant to the President for special projects. She will remain in an advisory role to the President through June 30, 2015.

"Corinne Brucks (above) did a research project with me over three semesters and we presented this work many different places including Missouri Academy of Science conference," wrote Dr. Ganga Fernando. She was the youngest undergraduate to attend this ASMS conference last May with me in Vancouver, Canada, but that was the whole idea of applying for this grant. I wanted to know how I can use my speciality area to encourage a young undergrad student to get into research without totally overwhelming her. She did a great job representing Cottey at the ASMS and making connections to go to her transfer school of Oregon State University this year."

project, including details of this new instrument, were presented at the fall academic showcase and the results of the project will be shared at the spring academic showcase.

ASMS Conference

In May 2012, Dr. Ganga Fernando and Cottey graduate Corinne Brucks '12 attended the American Society for Mass Spectrometrists International Symposium at Vancouver, Canada. They attended many research sessions including the "Mass Spectrometry for Undergraduates" workshop that was organized by a small group of researchers in the field including Dr. Fernando. Dr. Fernando also judged the undergraduate poster session at this symposium. This workshop attendance was supported by the Clover Faculty Development fund.

Summer Research for Faculty/Student Team

Dr. Fernando and a Cottey first-year student from Arizona, Gabriela De La Cruz were selected for a "Faculty/Student Summer Research Team" at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and spent 10 weeks in the summer carrying out research in Glycoprotein analysis by Ion Mobility Electrospray Ionization Mass Spectrometry (ESI-MS).

Gabriela presented her work at the UNL Summer Research Conference and won one of the $1000 travel awards that can be used to cover her cost to present her work at the National American Chemical Society conference within the next year. Dr. Fernando and Dr. Eric Dodds, in whose group she worked over the summer, are in the process of writing a chapter on "Ion Dissociation Methods in Proteomics" for the Encyclopedia of Analytical Chemistry which will be submitted this October. Both Dr. Fernando and Gabriela would like to thank the Cottey family who encouraged them to take on this task and especially the wonderful research group at UNL they got to work with.

Biennial Conference of Chemical Education (BCCE) – August 2012

Dr. Fernando spent a week in August at the Penn State University, Pennsylvania, where she gave a presentation titled "Evolution of a forensic chemistry laboratory at a small, independent, liberal arts college for women; from high school summer science program to 100 level chemistry curriculum" at the Biennial Conference of Chemical Education (BCCE). This was her first time attending the Chemical Education conference and she attended many sessions and learned about new teaching tools and research opportunities for undergraduates. She also attended several workshops during the five-day conference including "Process Oriented Guided Inquiry Learning (POGIL) Project Workshop: Facilitating Upper Level POGIL Courses - Analytical and Physical Chemistry."

Missouri Campus Compact Faculty Mini Grant

In late summer, Dr. Fernando also received a Missouri Campus Compact Faculty Mini Grant for her Cottey Chemistry Community Outreach (C3O) project. This grant will help the outreach that she has been working on over the past few years where Cottey chemistry students travel to local schools to present chemistry experiments and demonstrations to school children.

Cottey Business Students Study in Hong Kong

Editor's Note: For the second year in a row, as part of the requirements for Cottey's International Relations and Business major, Cottey students are studying overseas for a semester. Students Malyssa Dunson and Karie Dyer are at Hang Seng Management College in Hong Kong. Dunson sent this email to Dr. Gary Lunkenheimer, assistant professor of business and economics. Dr. Lunkenheimer wanted to share Dunson's note with others to highlight the business program at Cottey.

Hello Dr. Lunkenheimer,

I'm finally able to update you a little later than expected, due to our busy school schedules and recent activities at Hang Seng Management College.

We have visited a few surrounding areas like major shopping centers such as Newtown Plaza and Mon Kok (huge bargaining district) as well as having the opportunity to tour and sightsee Victoria Peak and Harbor (the beautiful city view of all the mega skyscrapers), Hong Kong Historical Museum, and China's first built grand Apple Store packed with so many people from Mainland China buying the latest electronics, etc.

And if you check out Hang Seng's website at www.hsmc.edu.hk and click on #2 under News and Events in bold, you will find a picture of us experiencing our first Hong Kong style BBQ, which was by invitation through the Careers Office, involving many students and their mentors to come together for a casual social time to get to know each other, cook food over an open fire, and exchange contacts. Our buddies, Latetia Lee and Lola Lam, have been very helpful in assisting us with anything, from answering questions to taking us out for our authentic meals when we first arrived.

Overall, we are doing very well here and are finally starting to get adjusted to living in our student hostel rooms. We managed to room together after all with two other first-year students and are currently waiting to hear from the Student Affairs Office and Dr. Raymond So about handling the major discomfort concern of sleeping on our rock-hard standardized bed mattresses.

Other than that, we have met many new friends, especially in our classes, which we are enjoying very much. My most favorite so far out of my five modules is Supply Chain Relationships and Negotiation, in which I have learned several different techniques and strategies to negotiate in order to fulfill the two in-class simulation exercises I have done in the past two weeks and in "good faith," I have gained what they call "capital surplus" in both my attempts at playing the role of a CEO and a manufacturing company. Might I add that Karie and I are tackling Hong Kong Business Law to the best of our ability and boy, is it a difficult and challenging subject to grasp, and involves a lot of reading which 80% of it will show up on our midterm and final exams coming soon, so we are determined to work harder for this class to keep up on reading and our first presentation is in three weeks too.

The instructor is quite humorous, nice, and is a lawyer himself, and gives us all sorts of advice to follow and suggest that as we approach the upcoming Lunar New Year Holiday week off, where many of the students here will go back home to their families. We may participate in the celebrations and as he mentioned, going to married couples' homes and collecting red pockets from them which is basically real "lucky money" that is meant to be spent or saved and what most Hong Kong people do during this holiday besides hanging all sorts of decorations, lanterns and giving gifts. So, while we are left to plan out our break, we will consider saying the magic phrase "gong hai fat choy" which means "bring wealth" to the local married couples we come across and most likely see fireworks and performances yet to begin.

Nevertheless, my operations management class has also been very interesting (currently working on a group assignment to design a new product line for a Honeymoon Dessert Company) and both Karie and I are slowly learning Mandarin Chinese in our Beginners Chinese class and have practiced dialogues and vocabulary words in four different tones used in this language alone, besides getting better acquainted with Hong Kong's rich, unique and metaphorical folktales, culture, and traditions in our Intro to Chinese Culture class (including dynasties, festivities, and more).

One thing that you will probably get a kick out of is that last week Karie and I happened to come across cheaper necessities in a local convenience store in Kwong Yuen Estate Community (literally right next door to the school) and after making our purchases, we end up exploring a similar store around the corner to suddenly being stopped by the clerk smoking his cigarette, first asking me to reveal what I had in my bag (while Karie and I are thinking maybe we have to let him hold what we bought before entering the store to prevent stealing or something) then glancing directly at our price tags for each item we had and typing it out in his handy dandy calculator and dismissing us right afterwards, just to find out what our prices were!!

It's a competitive market out here and we couldn't resist telling you because right before we had left that store, we saw the exact same products on the shelf for a little more than what we paid, which also answers why the clerk just shook his head up and down in silence after noticing his prices were higher.

The transportation system, including buses, metros, and trams have been the best way to get around Hong Kong and there are many routes and lines to take, which sometimes is confusing to follow and the plazas and malls here are like a big maze too.

We have collected syllabi for each of our classes and didn't have to purchase any books whatsoever, which was such an absolute blessing! Our instructors have made their required books and references available to use in the library for free and in particular for Hong Kong Business Law. Our next door neighbor kindly let us borrow her books for the semester. However, the library hours are much shorter during the week and on the weekends here, so we always have to make sure to go early during our break times to check out books or use the facility for assignments, etc.

Similar to Cottey though, there is a quiet study and computer room for printing documents in our student hostel building opened 24/7. Indeed, much has gone on and there are plenty more things I would like to continue sharing with you about our experience. Thank you and look forward to hearing from you soon! Zaijian! = Goodbye!

Judy Bell '60 would like to give a quick update on her film project in Santa Fe. New Mexico is a leader in film production and she is very excited to be co-producing a television series with the film instructor at the Institute of American Indian Arts. Judy knew James Lujan in California, and he immediately liked her idea of producing a series that exposes his students to all facets of production, and then provides paid jobs under the mentoring of Local 480 members. With this experience students can qualify for union membership and receive verifiable credits. They are preparing the necessary legal documents, and then Judy will be assisting James in developing the curriculum and participating in classroom training. She will be involving the film students in all the prep and the problems that she is experiencing as she produces the project. Upon completion of filming, which they hope to be late summer 2013, they will be pitching it to a cable network.

Karen (Klein) Cameron-Brook '62 wants her Cottey friends to know that she has moved to Exeter, New Hampshire. Per Karen: My husband, Mitch Brook, passed away this September 11. He had pervasive cancer; refused chemo and radiation, and lived a good life with me at home until the end. Since he was a well-loved musician, I organized a memorial musical concert for him featuring some of Boston's best jazz musicians. Over 400 people attended and were energized and blessed! Also, Mitch was videotaped in June and will be one of four people featured in a Bethany Church (Greenland, NH) Christmas series called "Do You See What I See?" The program will be aired sometime in December online or on television.

She will be in Nevada to celebrate her class reunion at Founder's Day 2013, and hopes that you can be there to join in the fun and sharing of memories. It's hard to believe that 40 years ago the Cottey Class of '73 celebrated their graduation. So much has happened since then and she would love to see you at Founder's Day, April 5-7 to catch up on your years of news and life experiences. Barbara is still working on the North Slope of Alaska and commuting back and forth every two weeks. Her travel schedule allows her to join her husband on a cross country road trip this spring. They will take the Alaska Ferry from their home in Juneau to Bellingham, Washington. From Bellingham, they will drive to Meridian, Idaho, to visit her parents and from there on to Grand Haven, Michigan, to visit her husband's family. She'll fly back to work in Alaska, while her husband meets her two weeks later in Kansas City. They'll drive to Nevada for Founder's Day and then go on to Connecticut to visit their daughter. They have ferry reservations back to Juneau in mid-May, so it will be a long drive back across the U.S. Whew, that's a lot of driving. Barbara just recently registered on the Cottey Community site, so she hopes to hear from you online or better yet, to see you in person at Founder's Day.

Tracy Sherwood '94 is getting ready to start her year as an AmeriCorp VISTA volunteer at the beginning of February 2013. She is excited to be volunteering for the Washoe County School District in a more "official" capacity. She will be helping with their Parent University program; it provides free classes to all parents of Washoe County in topics ranging from parenting to advocacy to navigating the school system. Tracy has been a part of this program since its inception in her role as the chair of the WCSSD Council on Family Engagement (the COFE). She will be able to continue as the chair of the COFE, the secretary of the Gifted and Talented Advisory Council, a member of the Gifted and Talented Parent Connection, volunteering in her son's school, and she is a school district consultant teaching parents to use the online gradebook software and online registration during her time as a VISTA. Pretty full schedule for still being considered "just a mom" by most everyone. Family engagement is her passion and she will proudly stand on the soapbox and proclaim it to the world!!

Rosita N'Dikwe '96 and family welcomed their fifth child and first girl on September 14, 2012. Atapne Marie is adored by her big brothers and parents.

In May, Rosita completed her MPH thanks to the very active support of her husband. (She had been working on it full time while working full time.) And just in time as baby number five arrived 3 1/2 months later.

In Memoriam

Longtime Cottey English professor Charles Crawford Nash, Ph.D., 72, died on January 9, 2013, at his home in Nevada, Missouri.

Dr. Nash received his B.A. from New York University, his M.A. from Hunter College in New York, and his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota, and began his distinguished career at Cottey in 1973. An accomplished scholar and writer, he published and won awards for his short stories, and regularly contributed columns to local newspapers since 1976. Dr. Nash was also a gifted teacher. He was captivated by his students, saying that he was "intrigued and rewarded by seeing young women, undaunted by young men in the classroom, really blossom."

Colleagues, alumnae, and friends appreciated his wit and dedication to the College. He served as chair of the Faculty Senate and the Humanities Division, and coordinator of the English department. In 1993, he was named the Hattie B. Touhy Professor of English, an endowed academic chair he held until his retirement in 2004. He received the Missouri Governor's Award for Excellence in Teaching in 1995, and was selected as the 1998-99 Blanche Hinman Dow Honored Speaker. The Cottey College Alumnae Association presented him with the Friend of the College Citation Founder's Day in 2003. He considered serving on the search committee that selected Helen R. Washburn as Cottey's 10th president his most significant service to Cottey. As "Stumble and Bumble" construction, he and his late wife Ginny renovated a number of homes in Nevada. He participated in the Community Choir and the United Methodist Church Chancel Choir. Additionally, he was among the founders of the Friends of the Nevada Public Library.

He is survived by his daughter, Jessica Cathrine Nash, and his sister, Beverly Nash, Columbus, Ohio. He was preceded in death by his wife, Ginny, on November 13, 2010.

The family suggests contributions to the Nash Writing Award at Cottey College, started in his honor in 1995. It is awarded annually to the Cottey student selected by the English Department as having best demonstrated excellence in writing in the discipline of English.

Ona Lou Hondrum, wife of the late former Cottey College President Jon O. Hondrum (1969-1974), passed away at age 96 of natural causes on November 29, 2012, while at rest in her residence at Chateau III in Pleasant Hill, California. Her son, Fred Ackley, and daughter, Jane Stratton, were there during her last moments.

Ona Lou is survived by her daughter and son, and a grandson, granddaughter-in-law, and three great-grandchildren. All except the son, who lives in Atlanta, Georgia, live around the San Francisco Bay.

She was born in 1916 in Campbellsville, Kentucky, and graduated from Grand Junction, Colorado, high school. She earned the M.A. in music from UCLA and spent most of her adult life pursuing a career in music. She taught voice and piano in and around Denver and Long Beach, California. Later she sat on the board for the ProArts Symphony Orchestra in Walnut Creek, California.

Ona Lou was initiated into the P.E.O. in 1934. Her most recent chapter was chapter SB of Moraga, California. She holds honorary listings in "Who's Who in Music," and in "Women of the West," international biography, London, England, 1978 edition.

Ona Lou led a rich full life. Her adventures began when she and her family moved to post-war Germany in 1945 to settle down in the British Zone. While there, she hosted a program on Armed Forces Network (AFN). She also did extensive Red Cross volunteer work. Her first husband, Roger Ackley, worked for the government; so in the ensuing years, they and her two children found themselves living in such places as Cairo, Malta, Frankfurt, and Hamburg. In between those exotic spots, they spent time on the East Coast close to D.C.

Later, Ona Lou married Jon Hondrum, who would become Cottey College President from 1969 through 1974. While First Lady at Cottey, she acted as head of the voice department and choir director.

Jon passed in 1994 while they were living in Ocala, Florida; so Ona Lou moved to Walnut Creek, California, to be close to her daughter, Jane, and her family. After several local moves, Ona Lou settled in at the Chateau III in 2004, where she became active in the community by initiating and holding Sunday morning devotionals and hymn singing.

The top researchers in the field are invited to contribute and Dr. Rivard has been invited to author the article "Traditional Religion." He will have the option to regularly revise and update the article after publication and is welcome to write additional articles if he would like to propose a topic.

Prof. Theresa Spencer attended the Total Singer Workshop in Los Angeles. The Total Singer Workshop explored the differences between classical and popular voice technique, both pedagogical and scientific. Ten years of research at labs around the world comparing classical and popular mechanics were presented. The workshop defined, analyzed, and showed participants exactly how to sing and teach commercial vocal styles.

Dr. Trisha Stubblefield attended the triennial conference of the Society for the Study of American Women Writers, October 11-13, in Denver, Colorado.

Help Us Bring the Fine Arts

by Barbara Andes
Campaign Chairman

Cottey gives every student an opportunity to develop her artistic and creative talent whether it's through dance, painting, or by learning a musical instrument. Former students have commented on the benefit of an art education in their lives: "It unleashed my creative gift and I realized it was my calling," another "...fell in love with art and went on to earn a BFA in film at NYU."

Alumnae, P.E.O.s, and friends of women's education are supporting renovation of Neale Hall, the second oldest building on campus and the construction of a new 32,000 square foot Fine Arts Instructional Building. This project, which connects the two buildings, is a priority of the Campaign and a significant piece of the vision for the future growth of

Barbara Andes, campaign chairman
Past President International Chapter

Forty-one years later, this "temporary solution" is still being used as classroom and studio facilities.

Other fine art classes are scattered across campus in places not intended for instruction and in buildings designed for other purposes. Alumnae know better than anyone the challenges faculty and students face when dance classes compete with basketball and volleyball games in the gym; piano, voice, keyboard classes, and choir rehearsal are tightly scheduled in the administrative building; string, wind, and brass lessons are held in the basement of the chapel, the only place available for instruction.

There are five priorities of the Campaign, each exceedingly important for the growth of the College. The Fine Arts Instructional Building is the only capital project. This new facility will bring all art forms together in one building for collaboration, for dynamic interaction between the disciplines, and will foster greater creativity – and, all Under One Roof.

The new building will define the importance and value that Cottey places on the arts. No longer needing to share space this practical, utilitarian, state of the art facility will serve the needs of students and enhance their educational experience. There has never been a better time to make an investment in the future of the College.

Of the nine million dollars needed for construction, the campaign has raised one-third of that goal. Because debt is not incurred, money and pledges must be in hand before ground is broken. Individuals, alumnae, local, state, provincial, and district P.E.O. chapters have made pledges to name classrooms, atriums, dance studios, photography dark rooms, faculty offices, and floors in the building. One generous donor has pledged to name an enclosed bridge to connect the new space with the administration building – when she made her gift she said, it will bridge the old with the new. We appreciate the generosity of more than 16,000 donors and P.E.O. chapters throughout the Campaign for their foresight in supporting the vision of growth for Cottey.

All around the world where alumnae and P.E.O.s live, and chapters meet, they are helping to make this building a reality by designating a gift to the Fine Arts Instructional Building (FAIB). Consider designating your gift to the FAIB. It's as easy as making a note on the memo line of your check or pledge form by inserting FAIB; or if contributing online just check the appropriate box and we will make sure that your gift goes exactly where you want it to go. I hope you will join me and others in support of Cottey's future.

For more information on naming opportunities or to make a pledge contact Carla Farmer, campaign manager/senior major gifts officer at: Cottey College, 1000 W. Austin Blvd, Nevada, MO 64772-2790; phone 417-448-1418; or cfarmer@cottey.edu.

A Message From Your CCAA Board: The Best Is Yet To Come

By Mary Edelen '65, CCAA Board

The best is yet to come for our dear Cottey College, and it's up to us to make the Alumnae Challenge a success in 2013.

As Cottey College alumnae, we have a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to help fulfill a dream to transform Neale Hall, once a swimming pool and other incarnations, into part of a state-of-the-art Fine Arts Instructional Building (FAIB).

Cottey alumnae love their alma mater and appreciate the learning experiences afforded them while a student. The impact of those learning experiences is evident in the success of Cottey's graduates. Cottey's alumnae base is full of successful women-women who have contributed greatly to the arts, politics, business, science, parenthood and thousands of other ways in this country and abroad. These resilient women continuously praise Cottey as the reason for their success, and now have an opportunity to pay it forward.

The Alumnae Challenge is a wonderful effort, and we want you to have an opportunity to be involved and make a difference in the College that impacted your life so much. If you have already given, thank you! Perhaps you can even dig a little deeper in your financial bucket to send another gift or to make a 5-year pledge to the FAIB? If you haven't given, please consider being a part of this winning alumnae effort. Ask your parents, friends or your employer (for a matching gift) to make a donation. Anyone can give to the Alumnae Challenge.

The FAIB will not only elevate Cottey to be a premier college for the fine arts, but the addition of this state-of-the-art capital investment will also be a valuable asset to the entire Cottey community. It will be possible only with our help. Please be a part of this successful effort by making a gift online at <http://cottey.edu/give/alumnaechallenge>.

Alexis Self, number 7, under the watchful eye of Comets Head Coach Marla Kannady Foreman, gets the ball past a Longview defender in a fall volleyball match.

Volleyball Results

The Comets finished the 2012 regular season at 9-10, and were 1-1 in postseason play for an overall record of 10-11. This was a vast improvement over the 2011 season record of 5-22. Newcomer Skyler Ford (at 6'4") added height at the net, and moving sophomore Kymee Bair to the libero position greatly improved the Comets' defense. Outside hitter Alexis Self had a solid season as well. Several freshmen were key contributors to the success of the team also.

Kymee Bair and Alexis Self were named to the All-Region First Team and Kristina Coverdell was named to the All-Region Second Team.

Blazing Comets

The Comets are 16-2 as of press time and are a contender in Region XVI

This season, the basketball Comets have engineered an impressive turn around from last year, surprising even the members of the team and fans alike.

"I would say that our current record is a bit of a surprise," agreed Head Coach Dave Ketterman. "It is difficult to predict how players will perform individually which makes team play unpredictable. The biggest difference in this year's team and last year's team is the positive approach by our returning players to improve each day. These players approach each game as if it is their last game so we are getting a maximum effort each night. Combine that with continued improvement and performance by our first-year players and we have a chance to win in most games."

As of February 18, 2013, the Cottey College Comets are 16-2 and ranked 19th in the NJCAA division II poll—after being ranked 20th the prior week—compared to 6-16 for the 2011-12 season.

Team manager, sophomore Megan Griffin, sees the Comets as a team expecting to win.

"I would describe the team as confident," said Griffin. "I use this term because after their winning streak, they assumed they could win just about every game, and I think they were shocked when they lost. I do believe that they are more confident now than anything though. They know that they have the skills to win, and they are learning how to use their skills to their advantage to gain more wins."

The only team to defeat the Comets this season was Penn Valley from Kansas City, who have done it twice.

The fact that Cottey has—so far—defeated their other regional rivals has been impressive. North Central Missouri College has always been a nemesis of the Comets, yet Cottey traveled to Trenton, Missouri, and handily beat the Lady Pirates in their gym for only the second time in Ketterman's tenure.

"That was by far the best game we played all year," said Ketterman of the 71-48 win. "We put it all together in the second half and just kept pulling away."

The Comets, who led by a single point at the break, 29-28, scored 42 points in the final 20 minutes while holding the home team to 20 points in that half.

NCMC is a traditional powerhouse in Region XVI. In the last two years, however, no one is a pushover in the region. Three St. Louis Community Colleges merged their athletic departments into one team, which meant that the best players from three colleges were now on one team. Did we mention that the Comets defeated St. Louis on the road in January? Oh, and at home in February?

It isn't going to get any easier in the final games for the Comets especially when they close out the regular season against North Central at home on Tuesday, February 19. Everyone knows that the Lady Pirates will have revenge on the mind when they walk into Hinkhouse that night.

Whatever happens, this is one of the best teams the Comets have ever put on the floor, and they still have the potential to beat the 19-4 record of the 2010-11 team.

"From a basketball position, we have better guard play this year, leading NJCAA DII in assists per game (22), and significantly fewer turnovers per game (13)," Ketterman added. "We are getting good, efficient production in the offensive end and we are playing solid on defense. We have a good, selfless, competitive group

Comets shortstop Lexi Johnson attempts to turn the double play in a game from last year.

The Women of Spring

Forget the boys of summer, it's time for the women of spring. At Cottey College that can only mean: softball. And Cottey's women of spring are ready to play!

Softball fans got a hint this fall that the Cottey Comets were a team on the way up. In the fall exhibition season, the Comets had a winning record of 7-6-1. In the three years the Comets have been playing softball, this is the only time they have been able to claim a winning season...even if it was just a fall exhibition season.

The Comets will be looking for solid performances from their returning players. Stevie Van Horn is fourth on the Comets career list in stolen bases with six, and she still has another season to add to her total. Reanna Henderson is tied with Van Horn with six thefts. Van Horn is listed as a utility player, but can also pitch when needed. Cottey will also count on Lexi Johnson to anchor the infield from the shortstop position. Lexi played on the state championship Nevada High School team before joining the Comets last season.

Catcher Hallie Comer (with five stolen bases) and outfielder Rachel McPherson round out the second-year players for the Comets. New to this year's team will be outfielders Karla Dubon and Danielle Womack, second baseman Christine Nevins, catcher/infielders Raeann Mader and Selena Gochenour, and pitcher Emma Rathe.

When asked about this year's team, Stanley said, "I have a great group of ladies who have the drive to win. Although, we are down in numbers we have a lot of talent and ambition. We'll be the team to watch."

Adding to the excitement of the upcoming season, is the Comets have a home field to play on for the first time in their history. Previously, the Comets traveled north of town to Bushwhacker Field at Lyons Stadium to play their home games. But now, thanks to the generosity of benefactor Dorothy Vanek, the Comets have a field to call their own. The first pitch of the first home game on Vanek Family Memorial Field will be tossed on March 20, at 1 p.m. when the Comets face the junior varsity of Missouri Valley College.

Fans will want to make plans to attend the dedication of Vanek Family Memorial Field on March 29. (See item on page 11.) After the dedication, the Comets will face their border rival Ft. Scott Community College in a doubleheader that promises to be a good one.

Comets Aim for Record of athletes, and this contributes to a healthy, positive atmosphere on our team. This team has been a pleasure to coach.”

Returning players Blaklee Sanders and Bailey Braden have been stalwarts for the team. Sanders regularly finishes with double figures in points and often leads the team in scoring. Braden has also been a double-figure scorer for the Comets. With no true center on the team, these two forwards are the ones responsible for guarding the opposing teams’ post players and for rebounding in the lane.

“These players approach each game as if it is their last game so we are getting a maximum effort each night.”

Head Coach Dave Kettermann

“I would have to credit Blaklee Sanders as being the quiet leader of this group of sophomores,” said Kettermann, “but also have to commend Chelsey Rowland, Bailey Braden, Lanie Skaggs, and Petra Stankovic’ for taking the right approach each day in practice.”

Of course, several newcomers have been key contributors for the Comets as well. Dayna Turnbull, from New Zealand, is often the player who can outscore Sanders. On at least three occasions she has tallied more than 20 points in a game. Kat Zumalt has come off of the bench to give a needed scoring lift as well, and fans also admire the aggressive play of guard Caryli Ingles. Freshman Selena Gochenour looks to be a player who will grow into a leadership position next season as well.

By the time this issue of the Viewpoint is in your hands, both the final game and the postseason tournament will have concluded. Visit the Cottey website for the scores of the final games.

ALUMNAE DONOR REPORT

JULY 1, 2011-DECEMBER 30, 2012

A Message from The Coordinator of Alumnae Relations

A new year often brings opportunities to look forward at where we are going, and a chance to glance backwards at where we have been. That is exactly what we are doing at Cottey. This donor report is a way for us to look both directions. Of course, it is a chance to look back and recognize all the friends of the College who have contributed to Cottey's success. We at Cottey are so appreciative of your support. Without you, this college could not provide the same level of instruction or quality of services it does.

In some ways, this donor report is also a look forward. Typically, we've printed this report in the winter issue of the Viewpoint. However, with the Viewpoint moving from quarterly to three times a year, the report is printed in this spring issue and looks different than the typical donor report. This report is a hybrid of sorts, as it lists all gifts received in the last 18 months, covering both the end of the fiscal year, and the end of the calendar year. So, for example, if you look at the class comparison giving report on page 19, you'll see each class' giving listed for each of the last two fiscal years, and for the calendar year that ended December 31, 2012.

Another way we're looking both forward and backward is with our Alumnae Challenge which began last year. The challenge was issued to alumnae to raise $2 million to renovate Neale Hall as a part of the new Fine Arts Instructional Build-monumental undertaking, it is, in fact, similar to the challenge alumnae accepted to raise $500,000 for the Rubie Burton Academic Center. The goal was far exceeded, and alumnae ended up raising over $1 million for this project. And this was

ing. I hope by now you have heard of it, and that you have decided to participate in this challenge, which is a wonderful way for alumnae to leave their mark in this Defining Moment in Cottey's history.

While a $2 million challenge may seem like a about 20 years ago! I am extremely confident in the ability of alumnae to meet this goal, but it requires participation from each and every Cottey College alumna. I certainly hope you will participate in this awesome opportunity.

Many of you heard from us during our recent phonathon, where current Cottey students contacted our alumnae, updated them on campus happenings, and asked for a gift for the Alumnae Challenge. This was a first for us, and we'll report on the success of this effort in the next edition of the Viewpoint.

And speaking of the Viewpoint, we're very excited about what will be happening with your alumnae publication. I encourage you to read editor Steve Reed's note on the back page about what's going to happen with your summer issue. It will definitely be worth watching for!

Thank you again for everything you do for Cottey College. There is no doubt in my mind that Cottey alumnae are the best. I hope to see many of you at Founder's Day Weekend April 5-7, 2013.

AN INVITATION TO THE STOCKARD SOCIETY

The future of education for women made real. That is what Virginia Alice Cottey Stockard saw through her glasses.

At the age of 36, "Allie," as she was affectionately known to her family and friends, set out to achieve her lifelong ambition of founding a college for women. She looked at several sites in the Midwest and decided on the town of Nevada, Missouri, in 1884. There, her goal of providing educational opportunities for the young women of the community was welcomed with open arms and a donation of six acres of land.

Since then, Cottey College has grown and prospered. It now attracts female students from all over the United States and around the world. The excellent educational and leadership opportunities available to them are made possible by people like you, with the same foresight as the founder. Through planned giving, friends of the College have endowed scholarship, library, cultural, and unrestricted funds; established named professorships; and helped construct new spaces for teaching and learning.

To show appreciation, we have created the Stockard Society for those who include the College in their wills and estate plans. Their support for the mission and goals of this institution plays an important part in ensuring a strong future for Cottey College. Thank you to the following alumnae members of the Stockard Society for their commitment and vision. For more information about including Cottey in your estate plan, please call the Office of Institutional Advancement at 417-667-8181, ext. 2120, or email advancement@cottey.edu.

Cottery Calling

Last month, many of you received a phone call from a current Cottery student in the College's first organized phonathon to raise money for the Alumnae Challenge portion of the Defining Moment Campaign. The challenge is to raise $2 million in gifts and pledges from alumnae, which will allow the renovated Neale Hall in the proposed Fine Arts Academic Building to be renamed by the alumnae. Didn't get a call, but still want to contribute? Use the handy envelope tucked inside the Viewpoint, and read more about the Alumnae Challenge on page 9.

Making it Better Than It Was Before

by Steve Reed, editor

At the risk of showing my age, back in the 70s (when I was but a child, mind you), I loved to watch a popular television show titled The Six-Million Dollar Man. In that show, astronaut Steve Austin, played by Lee Majors, was in a tragic accident when his aircraft crashed upon re-entry. Still alive, but badly injured, Austin's life was saved when government scientists "improved" him with bionic parts. With the benefits of modern science, Austin now had super speed and strength along with a super cool bionic eye that let him see for great distances. In the opening montage, viewers saw masked surgeons looking down at the table with a voice over, "We can rebuild him. We have the technology. We can make him better than he was."

Although there are no bionic parts or secret government agencies, and the price tag is nowhere near $6 million, something similar is happening to your Viewpoint. We've decided we can rebuild it; we have the technology; we can make it better than it was before.

The most noticeable change will be moving from a tabloid newspaper style to a magazine format. The first magazine will be the summer issue. This spring issue is the last newspaper format for the Viewpoint.

An on-campus ad hoc committee of Darcie Callahan, Miranda Kassner, Courtney Majors, Kathryn Pivak, Susan Yoss, and co-chaired by editor Steve Reed and Tracy Cordova is helping outline the transition to the magazine format. They have drafted a position statement for the new Viewpoint and content guidelines which will not only help Viewpoint staff maintain a consistent image and voice, but will also guide the designer as he creates templates for the publication. The committee will be working with graphic designer Paul Lewis from Minnesota who has done design work for several college magazines.

The other noticeable change for the Viewpoint will be its frequency. To make the production cost increase sustainable in the budget, the Viewpoint will now be printed three times per year rather than quarterly. We're confident that our readers will not miss that extra issue if we can provide a better product three times a year. We are sure this new format will better reflect the quality of Cottery College to our audiences.

Recently, an electronic readership survey was sent to a random sampling of Viewpoint readers. If you received the survey link and completed it, many thanks. If you received the link and have not completed it, we encourage you to do so as these results will also help shape content guidelines for the new Viewpoint.

Over the years, we've done many things to improve the look of the Viewpoint. It went from a black and white publication on newsprint, to a full-color edition on high quality paper. What used to be loose pages folded in half are now a "stitch-and-trim" (stapled and face trimmed) publication that mails flat. The next step is to move to a magazine format.

Cottery alumnae are rightly proud of their alma mater. We want to ensure that their alumnae publication reflects the quality of the College as well. Personally, I can't wait for you to see the first edition of the magazine and to get your feedback.
